'Hamptonality' sets Hampton Inns apart

The Chamber View

Jason Fink, President/CEO

It feels that winter is finally over. We've had a couple of weeks now with spring-like weather and it is getting me excited about what is ahead of us for the remainder of this year. Add to that, the ability come April 19, for anyone who wants to get a COVID vaccine will be able to get in line to receive one, hopefully come summer we'll see normalcy return back to our lives.

Before jumping ahead, I did want to take a moment to look back at the Education Celebration. This is an event that I always look forward to given that it's our opportunity to feature students, teachers and alumni from our schools and colleges here in Lycoming County. In 2020, this was the last program that we held pre-pandemic with over 200 in attendance at the Country Club. If you caught any of the news on this event, you read that there were several changes with a larger venue at Bald Birds in Jersey Shore, greatly reduced numbers with less than 120 attendees, and all were in masks. However, while all of those changes took place, we still had the opportunity to recognize graduating seniors for their many achievements, educators for their contributions to students in our district and alumni from Lycoming and Penn College. It was nice to see how some of the districts took a different approach with their educators recognition and recognized the school nurses.

In addition to these awards, we also have recognized many businesses for their involvement with a school or schools here in the county. This award affords us the opportunity to highlight the work being done by area businesses with the districts in enhancing their work with students. Like many other things we've all been doing, the Chamber took a different approach with this year's award. Instead of recognizing just one business, we decided to recognize over 20 of them for their efforts last spring to ensure that kids who rely on the district for a lunch, didn't miss out on it. If you recall, when the schools shut down last March there were a number of children impacted in not having access to the breakfast and lunch that are there for them.

Fortunately, there were many restaurants, pizza and sub shops here in our county that heard about this and offered free meals to these kids. These same businesses were also struggling with trying to maneuver their way through the regulations that were coming out at that time which were affecting their operations. However, they saw that this was a need which needed to be addressed and were more than willing to step up with a solution. We were proud of their efforts and honored to be able to recognize them for this selfless act during a challenging time in our world.

We just wrapped up a job fair at the Liberty Arena. There were 35 businesses in attendance with good, family sustaining positions open for hiring. Hearing some of the challenges that companies in our area and across the country are dealing with, we wanted to add an extra incentive to get those unemployed to attend. Our offer was fairly substantial; come to the job fair and get a job with one of the participating businesses by June 30 and we'll enter you into a drawing to win a $1000 hiring bonus paid by the Chamber. It was advertised through various media outlets, including radio, print, online and social media with the promotion as one of the key points to attend.

Unfortunately, I hate to share that we had a very low turnout to the event. With an unemployment rate at roughly 6.8%, we had less than 150 people come out to it. Those businesses in attendance shared that they have seen this and are frustrated about their inability to hire. If you look at the companies that we had there, which included businesses such as ADS, Kellogg's, LeClerc, you know that they have strong wages and benefit packages. The plant manager at ADS shared that they're an ESOP and they have people working there for just over 20 years that have over $1m in their retirement. They have a number of positions open as they've just secured the largest contract ever by any of the 40+ ADS plants. However, he's having a hard time getting people to even come in and apply.

Talking to several other companies at the job fair, they all cited that the current level of federal and state unemployment assistance has dulled the desire for people to get a job. Nobody would argue that during the peak of the pandemic, this assistance was needed to help those impacted through that time. Now, though, with the number of jobs going unfilled, one has to ask if that level of assistance is needed. If we're wanting to see growth and improvements in our county through adding new employers, it will be difficult to achieve if we can't get people who want to work at them. We've been known for decades for the quality workforce that supports area business and industry.

Many of the workers at the local businesses are getting to retirement age. We need the next generations to step up and take on these positions. If you know someone that is unemployed, tell them to give us a call. We'd be happy to share the list of businesses that were at the job fair. They can also go to CareerLink or any of the employment agencies here in the area to get connected to a job. We all want a better community and one step to having that is by seeing the unemployment rate drop below our current level.

The Chamber Celebrates Education

The Chamber held its 20th Annual Education Celebration at the Bald Birds Brewing Company on March 25. The event included awards for the Business Partner in Education, Alumni of the Year, Outstanding Professional Educator and Outstanding Senior.

This celebration was certainly special given the past year of challenges for everyone, especially the students and educators.

The Alumni of the Year Award was presented to a graduate from Lycoming College and Pennsylvania College of Technology, who also sponsored this award. This award recognizes individuals who attended college and have stayed in the area. This year's recipients were Dr. Charles Lamade, M.D. Class of 1975 from Lycoming College and Ken Healy, Class of 1990 and 2001 from Pennsylvania College of Technology. Both colleges sent a video of their recipients accepting the award, which was shown at the event.

The Business Partner in Education Award is typically awarded to only one business, but with this past year being one of the most difficult years for the students, the decision was made to award many of the restaurants, sub and pizza shops that stepped up to provide free meals to the students impacted by the school closures. We recognized their efforts in helping to keep kids fed, as they were also being challenged by closures. The awards were personally distributed to each business. This award was sponsored by UPMC Health Plan and Allison Crane & Rigging.

The Outstanding Educator Award, sponsored by The Kasenchak Family, recognizes educators from each school district who makes extraordinary contributions to the education profession.

The Outstanding Senior Award, sponsored by M&T Bank, is awarded to students selected because of their performances in academics, leadership, activities, and community service. Each student is interviewed by a committee which selects one senior as the grand prize winner. Andree Phillips, Chair of the Education Committee and on the interviewing committee, shared some of the information given during the interviews. The students received a gift bag with a set of twig crayons, which symbolizes the diversity in our world, and gift cards from local businesses who provided meals to the students during the pandemic. The First Community Foundation Partnership of Pennsylvania purchased these gift cards. They, along with The Muncy Bank & Trust Company and PPL Electric Utilities sponsored "Creating Powerful Communities".

This year's Outstanding Senior award was presented to Rory Oden, Muncy High School. She received a $250 cash award from M&T Bank and a college textbook scholarship for $500 sponsored by the Williamsport Sun-Gazette.

LL Virtual Law Enforcement & the Judiciary Program Day

The Leadership Lyncoming Class of 2021 began their virtual Law Enforcement & the Judiciary program day with the Lyncoming County Court of Common Pleas Judges including President Judge Nancy Butta, Judge Marc Lovrenchio, Judge Jay Reynolds McCoy, Judge Eric Linhardt, and Judge Ryan Tira. They spoke about their responsibilities and the structure of the local courts. The class also heard from Court Administrator Adrienne Stahl and Deputy Court Administrator, Mirna Carrozzini about the operations of the courthouse and how the courts have adapted to the pandemic. The class also learned about Lyncoming County's Adult and Juvenile Probation offices from Ed McCoy, Harry Rogers, John Stahl, and Matt Staszione. After learning about our local probation system, the class had a session on transition and re-entry back into the community with Deemie Keeler, Justice-Works Youth Care; Shaneka Grey and Molly Kirby, Transitional Living Centers, and Michael Boughton and John Hogan, GEO Lyncoming County Reentry Service Center, along with a guest who is currently enrolled in Transitional Living Centers' program.

Magisterial District Judges Christian Frey and Gary Whiteman joined the class to discuss their roles within the local court system and the areas of the county they serve. Next, Lyncoming County Department of Public Safety Director Jeffrey Hutchins and EMA Manager Kelle Robinson shared information on emergency preparedness and the County's 9-1-1 call center.

An informative presentation proved we have an efficient and well-established system in place, should an emergency occur. To end the day, the class learned about the different roles in the criminal justice system with a panel discussion including Chief County Detective Mike Simpler, Sheriff Mark Lusk, Chief Public Defender Nicole Spring and District Attorney Ryan Gardner.

Thank you to David Boyle, Geisinger, Harry

Rogers, Lyncoming County Prison, and Joe Weber, Lyncoming Children and Youth Services for serving as program day hosts.

Thank you to Lynn Frey, HLaST Intermediate Unit 17 and Kendra Parke, American Rescue Workers, for being class reporters.

Special thank you to our Tier 3 program day sponsors: Malee Law Firm, P.C. and Ralph S. Alberts Co., Inc.

Everyone needs a day off! Jedi, Lyncoming County Courthouse Canine, is enjoying some well-deserved days off. LL Class of 2021 enjoyed learning about Jedi's duties and wished him and his handler, Jerri Rook, a happy and healthy break!

During the Leadership Lyncoming Class of 21 Law Enforcement and Judiciary Program day, the class was lucky enough to hear from their very own classmate, Michael Boughton, on the topic of Transition and Re-Entry Back to the Community. Thank you Mike for speaking and sharing all of your knowledge with the class!

Matt Staszione shared the juvenile probation's focus in Lyncoming County is to rehabilitate the offenders and to help prevent recidivism. This is done by using many resources that are available to them throughout the county that are tailored to the needs and situation of the individual that is on probation. The class would like to thank Matt, along with Ed McCoy, John Stahl, and Harry Rogers, who lent their time to provide information about the probation system in Lyncoming County!

'Hamptonality' sets Hampton Inns apart

By MALLORIE McILWAIN

Downtown and Faxon exit Hampton Inns have strong "Hamptonality," by providing a "friendly, authentic, caring and thoughtful service" according to Madge Guiser, area director of hotel operations.

She said that "Hamptonality" was a term created by the Hampton brand, acquired by Hilton Worldwide, meaning a special personality that all Hampton employees encompass; one that is community based, friendly, thoughtful and "willing to go above and beyond."

"Our people are what sets us apart," she said. "We hire for personality and train for skill."

Some of the local Hampton Inn employees have been with the hotel since it opened over 10 years ago.

"We are like a family," Guiser added. "We try and create an experience for our guests."

Guiser herself started at the downtown Hampton Inn in 2000 and moved to the Faxon exit location after its opening in 2014.

Together the two have 223 rooms, special accommodations and complimentary amenities like: a hot breakfast, Wifi, business and fitness centers, indoor pool, small meeting room, patio and grill as well as what they call a "Suite Shop" which has snacks, drinks meals and other convenience needs.

The downtown location also just got an entire renovation in 2018 having a "brand-new" like feeling to the rooms.

There are also a lot of suite options at the Faxon location that have a living area in addition to the sleeping area according to Guiser.

There are standard rooms that come with one king-size or two queen-size beds, coffee makers, iron and ironing board, refrigerator and microwave.

The business has been offering a digital key through the Hilton Honors app for over three years, but it has certainly come in handy during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Those who wish to stay at the hotels can download the app, book a room and have their key sent electronically to their phones, so when they were to come into the business they could limit their contact with other people and just go to their rooms.

‘Hamptonality’ sets Hampton Inns apart

“With the pandemic, they don’t have to stop and get keys and be afraid,” Guiser added.

In addition, Hampton Inn also uses Hilton’s new CleanStay cleaning standard to provide guests with a “peace of mind” during the pandemic.

This cleaning standard builds on top of the “already high standards of housekeeping and hygiene” and is visible for guests. The rooms that have the CleanStay seal show that a room has not been touched since being thoroughly cleaned. There are wrappers around the TV remote showing that it has been cleaned as well as sanitizing wipes in each room for guest use. Public areas are also being cleaned multiple times a day with focus on the high touch areas. Masks are also required for guests and team members.

Over the years, the Hampton Inns has not only been community oriented in the business sense, but have also tried their best to donate to local charities and fundraisers to maintain that strong Williamsport connection.

“We have a dress down fund,” Guiser said.

This fund allows employees to dress down on Fridays for $5 and all of the proceeds get put together for a local charity.

In addition to that, they have also participated in the Alzheimer’s Walk, collected for local Toys for Tots and donated their old linens, blankets and pillows to the American Rescue Workers and homeless shelters.

Guiser also wants readers to know that they are hiring through their Facebook page and are excited to welcome new people into their hardworking team.

For more information, please contact Madge Guiser directly at madge.guiser@hilton.com.

PNC Bank is community oriented

By MALLORIE McILWAIN
mmcilwain@sungazette.com

PNC Bank, located both on West Fourth Street and inside the Giant store on East Third Street, is heavily involved in the Williamsport community and not just by their depository, lending, wealth management, investment and financial planning services.

“Many of our employees who work in the market are deeply involved in the community,” said Aaron Bowers, senior vice president and retail market manager for PNC in the Central PA region.

“Our purpose is to make a positive difference and to help all customers move forward financially.”

Many of the local PNC Bank employees volunteer their time to charities and local boards not to mention the strong connection the bank has with the James V. Brown Library.

The bank helps support programs at the library to help children and families have access to technology, art and literature.

“It connects to our PNC signature focus,” Bowers said. “Customer focus drives everything we do.”

PNC not only has normal bank services, but also helps “take a look at where customers are in their financial well-being” by providing investment services to help plan for retirement or the future of their family.

“We understand where their goals are,” Bowers said. “We have the customer financial wellness conversation model to help understand what their needs are...they are different from customer to customer.”

The bank even has advisors to help guide and engage in financial planning.

“We really help customers strategize on creating a legacy for their families,” Bowers added.

This gives the bank a “hometown” feel but there are so many capabilities PNC uses to help make banking the most efficient and easy process for each and every customer.

There are multiple digital channels like online and mobile banking as well as ATM needs.

“We pride ourselves on making it easy for customers ... we want to make it the easiest place to bank and invest,” Bowers said.

Paulhamus Diesel Performance is ‘constantly evolving’

By MALLORIE McILWAIN
mmcilwain@sungazette.com

JERSEY SHORE — Paulhamus Diesel Performance, located at 2007 Dennison Drive in Jersey Shore, works to service any large or small vehicle or diesel truck for business, municipality or family needs.

Dan Paulhamus, owner and founder, started the business over eight years ago after being in the motor industry for over 10 years working for numerous Chevrolet dealerships.

“PDP is capable of all repairs for most makes and models on the road,” Paulhamus said. “Our ability to diagnose and repair late model vehicles, especially late model diesels, makes us special.”

The business not only services every vehicle from your family van to your diesel pickup truck, but also helps out local municipalities as far as Wellsboro as well as fleet trucking needs.

Diesel transmissions and tuning, A/C services as well as state and emissions inspections tests are also done at PDP.

But they don’t stop there.

They also provide services and maintenance to agricultural equipment like tractors.

Products from companies like: Road Armor, BOSCH, AMSOil, Danville Performance and more are also available.

He added that the performance of a vehicle, having it being used to its peak and intended use, is of great importance.

“It was something that I saw an opportunity to provide a service that wasn’t being provided in the area, even at a dealership level,” Paulhamus added. “I knew there was a market for it and so I took the chance and went with it. It has been very good.”

He added that the business is “constantly evolving” to having the “latest and greatest in the diesel market” while also expanding the shop to provide a well-rounded vehicle center for any motor needs.

“Every year we are growing, which is fantastic,” he said.

PDP is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Susquehanna Mills Co., produces cooking oil on a local, regional level

MUNCY — Susquehanna Mills Co., located at 349 Village Road, started out as a biodiesel company in the early 2000s, making fuel out of waste cooking oil, and is now a regional cooking oil company that services a number of universities and restaurants with a cooking oil recycling program, as well as makes cooking oil to sell directly on their website.

The interest in making this high-quality cooking oil came from a question from a friend.

The friend asked Joshua Leidhecker, owner, if he could cook a turkey in the oil he was making for his business, and the rest is history.

“It lead to figuring out where this oil comes from...we collected the oil and took it there (to cook),” Leidhecker said. “I bought a bunch of books to learn what the differences are and figured out how to refine my business and get the oil into conditions that restaurants would be able to use it.”

Every year the business has expanded their operations in one way or another — from getting more knowledge to even more equipment and business partners.

Today, they serve 17 universities from local to as far south as Baltimore, from Lycoming College and Bucknell University to the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton — but every component is regional to Central Pennsylvania.

The packaging is from Berwick, retail bottles are made in Hazleton and Leidhecker’s neighbor in Jersey Shore makes the cardboard boxes.

“Beyond the uniqueness (of the high quality cooking oil), our commitment to really utilizing and supporting the resources in our region makes us special,” Leidhecker said.

“Our tagline is local, sustainable, awesome,” April Line, special projects manager, said.

With their university partners, Susquehanna Mill Co. gives them the oil, and takes their waste oil to then upcycle it into biodiesel fuel, making it “full circle oil recycling.”

Unfortunately the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic had a negative financial impact on the business.

“In the spring when it first happened, we had lost all of our college accounts,” Leidhecker said.

But as restaurants and universities begin to ramp up operations, things are slowly starting to come back, according to Leidhecker.

This year, the business hopes to continue their involvement with local food scenes, especially in Williamsport and Montoursville farmer’s markets, with the hopes to expand to Lewisburg.

“We are looking to expand our reach to support the small entrepreneur,” Leidhecker said. “We are trying to work and improve, and also work with the city to make it a destination spot on Saturday mornings.”

He added that this year the business is also working on an agri-tourism approach to their marketing while also having small events like a spring festival at their shop.

“There is a local supply of oil in the Susquehanna Valley,” Leidhecker added. “This resource is available to everyone...we encourage you to spend your dollars locally and support local families. We are more than happy to serve you.”
