From Jason's Desk

Jason Fink, President/CEO

August is finally here, and yes, there will be a Little League World Series. Yeah, I get it that it's not what we all want, but given everything going on in the world, I'll take it, and be happy for getting something over nothing like we had last year. Very excited to be partnering with the team of the City of Williamsport in doing Williamsport Welcomes the World. We've had to adjust along the way given that we're still not fully out of the pandemic. However, very excited to say that it's taking place in downtown Williamsport on August 20 and that we've got Hall of Fame Left Fielder and top 5 all-time base stealer, Tim Raines. In addition to Raines coming in, we're excited to share that Reggie Jackson is making a return appearance on August 21.

Beyond Little League, if you haven't gotten a chance to follow any of our FB postings, you probably missed the visit of relatives from local royalty last month. We were pleased to see that the great, great, great grandson of Prince Farrington came to Lycoming County in July to enjoy our Prince Farrington Bootlegger's Tour. If you haven't checked this out, go online and learn more about the tour and how you can get your passport to enjoy it. We've got some great breweries, wineries and distilleries here in the area and are happy to be partnering with them for this tour.

In the local job market, it's good to see that our unemployment numbers continue to drop. Last month, we saw it drop to 5.9% which is below the state's average. That's good to see, however, it's still challenging for businesses that are looking to fill positions.

The Chamber recently did a listening session with roughly 15 local business representatives and officials from Labor and Industry, and DCED, to discuss these challenges. We were pleased to receive a willing ear to see what can be done by businesses that are facing these challenges. All had multiple positions available that paid over $10/hr with the bulk of them over $15/hr with solid benefits. These employers cited that they spent significantly on recruiting with on-line, radio, billboards and newspaper being outlets where they've advertised. Additionally, they offered incentives to current employees that provide leads for people to hire. Unfortunately, they're just not getting people that want to work at this point. While the state officials didn't see the additional $300 of unemployment as a main reason for these challenges, the employers did, citing that it's just not all that people are receiving. There's also the stimulus checks, rent and utility assistance, additional SNAP money for food, along with the child tax credit that has come into play. The Sun Gazette ran an editorial recently that noted that one can receive up to $50,000 in annual assistance right now. In talking to employers, they realize the challenge in telling someone to come to work when you can stay home and receive this level of funding without going to work. The good thing is that the extra $300 for unemployment should be coming to an end next month. As with states that ended their's earlier, we'll hopefully see more motivation for people to get out there and take on these good family, sustaining jobs that are here in Lycoming County.

Before closing out, I need to take a moment to recognize someone who recently passed that had a great influence on my life in high school. Those of you that may recall, I went to Montgomery Area School District and was fortunate enough to have Gus Spizzirri as a teacher and coach. Gus taught at Montgomery for several decades and was involved with athletics here in the region as a football ref and track coach. He actually started the track and field program in Montgomery back in the early 70's. After retiring, he worked part-time at White Deer Golf Course and was on the Montgomery School Board for many years.

He was passionate about kids and found value in everyone. I got to know him as a teacher but more as my track coach. Gus could be gruff, but most of the time it was just to push you to be better and put more effort into whatever he wanted you to do. He was like that in the classroom too. You may not have always agreed, but, he showed you the respect of your opinion, and I have always appreciated learning that from him. Hopefully, that's something that we all find again because it seems to be lost at this time. To Gus's family, thank you for sharing him with me and with many others. Hopefully you've enjoyed reading the various stories on line, (especially those driver's ed ones that we all have at least one to remember) and how he positively impacted everyone's life who walked the halls at Montgomery High.

Chamber Presents Bonus Check

On March 31, 2021, the Chamber of Commerce held a Job Fair at the Liberty Arena to help area companies fill the many open job positions they have after the effects of COVID-19. As an extra incentive, the Chamber promoted a drawing for a hiring bonus for anyone who attended the job fair, secured a job with one of the participating companies, and were still employed with that company at the end of June. We were very delighted to choose Connor Oldt who secured a job with J.B. Gibbons Construction as Project Manager/Estimator. Below, Jason Fink, President of the Williamsport/Lycoming Chamber of Commerce, presents Connor Oldt with a $1,000 hiring bonus. Congratulations Connor!

Montoursville comes alive in the summer

By BETHANY BARRETT
bbarrett@sungazette.com

New and returning events are being held this summer in Montoursville Borough.

Some of these activities include local band performances in the park, movies in the park and a new disc golf course available to the public.

Indian Park in Montoursville is the spot for most of these summer happenings.

With 18 baskets in total, the new disc golf course is bringing newcomers to the park.

“People travel from different areas to come to it, it might bring some more people into Montoursville borough who wouldn’t be here before,” said Mayor of Montoursville Borough, Steve Bagwell.

The disc golf course is free to the public to play.

“It gives people of all ages an exciting new activity to participate in. ...It’s lovely and uses many areas of the park that have previously gone unused,” said Bagwell on Facebook.

There is a cellphone app called UDisc Disc Golf that is available for anyone wanting to interact with others in the community who play disc golf at Indian Park, as well as a Facebook page.

As the Montoursville population gets back into the swing of summer events, local businesses are also said to be thriving, just as they always have.

"Montoursville is returning to normal activities, everything is good. ...Our restaurants are busy, our businesses are booming, school is returning in a normal fashion, I think everything is going over very well," said Bagwell.

Members of the Montoursville Borough community are said to be very generous and willing to help one another out.

"We've always been a tight-knit community, and we remain that way.

Everyone has always been happy to work together. ...People give freely, they're very generous" said Bagwell.

The Bald Eagle Art League keeps art alive

By MARTY WEAVER
news@sungazette.com

The Bald Eagle Art League is still flying high nearly 50 years after its inception.

The league was formed Oct. 12, 1972, according to a document written by former secretary Jean Dunkleberger, which is currently in the possession of the Thomas T. Taber Museum.

The structure of the league is based on the Huntingdon Long Island Art League, according to the document.

“The Art League’s mission statement is to foster excellence, diversity and vitality in the visual arts of North Central Pennsylvania through a combination of art education, community outreach and service sponsorship,” according to the league’s website, TheBaldEagleArtLeague.weebly.com.

Current League President Don Kline said that the group keeps busy with shows throughout the year.

The Bald Eagle Art League is in charge of the Way’s Garden Art Show, which is held in June at Way’s Garden on West Fourth Street. This year’s show saw Bald Eagle Art League members selling their works and a concert by the Repasz Band.

The Best of the Bald Eagle Art League is a show held every November in the Taber Museum, and the league also hosts combination shows in the spring with the Station Gallery in Lock Haven, which is part of the Clinton County Arts Council.

“We also provide things for the Genetti,” Kline said.

The league hosts artists in the Genetti’s lower level in the former Taphouse, a restaurant that recently underwent renovations and will reopen soon under the name Windows on 4th. The artists typically stick around to showcase their work and talk to visitors on First Fridays.

The next Genetti featured artist — and the first since renovations began — is Chastety Starr, whose work revolves around the theme “the color blue,” as all pieces contain blue somewhere.

“In addition... we have our monthly meetings September through May at the Taber Museum,” Kline said.

Meetings are held the first Thursday of the month at 7 p.m. Guest artists are invited to show their work and talk to members about art education, give demonstrations and espouse advice on how to market art work.

Kline estimates membership to be around 60 to 70 people, encompassing “novices to professionals.”

“Students are encouraged to become members and learn,” Kline said.

“In the beginning there were eight... In a few months, there were 92 charter members,” Dunkleberger wrote. “In succeeding years, membership would rise to nearly 200 and, due to renown of some of its artists... the league would be known in many parts of the United States.”

The Barn Fabric Center 'a stable and reliable source'

By MARTY WEAVER
news@sungazette.com

The Barn Fabric Center is celebrating nearly three-quarters of a century in business.

Located in a former horse stable off of Williamsport's Millionaires' Row, The Barn is "the largest independent fabric retailer/wholesaler in Central Pennsylvania," according to its website, BarnFabricCenter.com.

"We're a retail store that specializes in upholstery," owner Gary Golbitz said.

The Barn does quite a bit of custom work, including but not limited to drapery, window treatments, upholstery, bedspreads, blinds, pillows, bed skirts and foam rubber products, according to its website.

The Barn boasts a 100-mile work radius.

"People travel to see us because we're unique with what we do," Golbitz said.

The Barn was opened in 1950 by Jake Golbitz, Gary's father, and Gary took over in 1981, according to the website.

Golbitz said that The Barn operates through retail, wholesale and internet sales. Clientele include hospitals, nursing homes, colleges and decorators, along with members of the surrounding communities.

Fabrics can be viewed and even purchased online through The Barn's website.

The Barn also recently rejoined the Lycoming County Chamber of Commerce.

The building is positively stuffed with rows upon rows of fabrics of all shapes and sizes, neatly organized by type and color. Visitors to the store can sometimes find newly upholstered furniture ready to be picked up, showcasing the business' craftsmanship and skill.

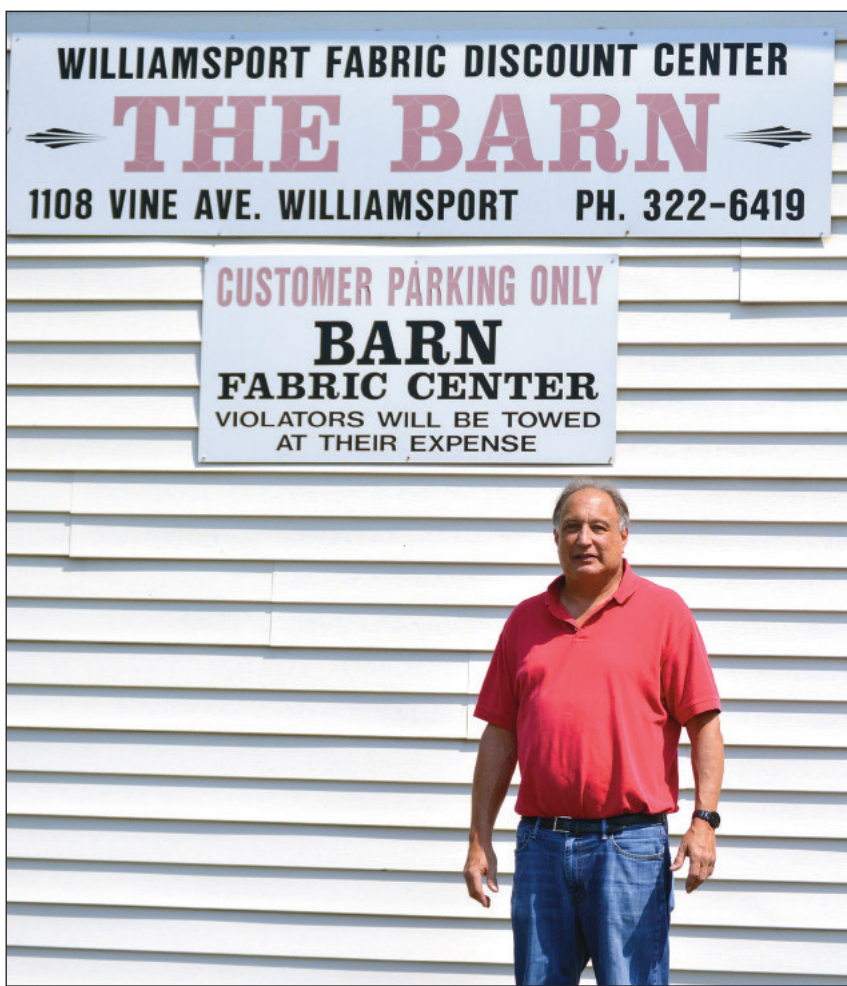

"The original inventory for the business began through the acquisition of textile remnants from local furniture companies, drapery workrooms and clothing manufactures," per The Barn's website. "Today, they still purchase from furniture companies but mostly from the top names in the upholstery and drapery industries..."

"The product lines consist of tapestries, brocades, velvets, olefins, chenille, jacquards, cottons, sheer, micro-suedes, sunbrella types and remnants. All products are below market prices."

The Barn is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Sundays and evenings by appointment.

The Barn Fabric Center is located at 1108 Vine Ave. and can be reached at 570-322-6419.

"We are a stable and reliable source with a proud history," the website reads. "Our mission is to provide our customers with the best products at the best prices with the most genuine and sincere quality service."
